Television programmimg should be monitored by the parents not the government. The American society is quick to condemn the broadcast networks, when in reality the networks are only programming shows that they think will draw the largest audience. Parents can stop this by turning off the tv and spending more quality time with their children.